O R D E R:

Policymakers, programme implementers and funders alike are interested in knowing whether programmes are reaching their intended audience, achieving expected results and whether projects are run in a cost effective and efficient manner.

2. In this scenario, there is a need to develop a cost-effective monitoring and evaluation system that can generate sufficient quality of data, and enough information to provide departments, agencies, planners and implementers with a reliable understanding of the outputs, outcomes and impacts of development initiatives.

3. The programme is designed to provide insights into the critical and practical dimensions of conducting evaluations. It will cover evaluation design, quantitative and qualitative evaluation methodologies and analyses, questions of rigor and validity; measuring change; designing questionnaires and tools; attribution and contribution analyses; participatory methods, evaluation ethics; building gender and equity into evaluations; and communicating evaluation results effectively.

4. In this context, the Administrative Staff College of India (ASCI), Hyderabad is offering a five day training programme on “Effective Development Evaluations- Design, Method and Impact”.

5. Government after considering the significance of the Programme on “Effective Development Evaluations- Design, Method and Impact”, nominate Sri A. Sudershan Reddy, Joint Director, Planning Department to participate in the above training programme at Administrative Staff College of India, Hyderabad from 15-07- 2013 to 19-7-2013.
